The Argentinean side of the falls provides a more intimate contact with the whole Iguazu Falls experience. A free train carries visitors from the gate to the falls, themselves. The small open train has three different stations and travels through the tropical forest. There are also many paved walking trails throughout the reserve; you may choose to walk the 1/3 mile to the falls on a trail through the subtropical vegetation, perhaps catching glimpses of wildlife and certainly multitudes of butterflies.

UPPER CIRCUIT: The upper circuit (Circuit Superior) consists of trails and bridges that run along the top of the falls. The views are FANTASTIC! This circuit is a bit less than 1/2 mile and has six lookouts and viewing areas. The catwalks present spectacular views of "Devil's Throat, the premier collection of fourteen of the highest most powerful of the falls.

LOWER CIRCUIT: The lower circuit (Circuit Inferior) leads to the base of the falls, where undoubtedly, you will be moistened by the spray of the might falls.

The entire loop is about one mile long. During the circuit, you will find yourself immersed in scenic nature full of sight, sounds, and aromas to entertain your senses. There are eight lookout points to gather in the majesty of the largest of the falls.
